THIS IS PART 2 OF A PROJECT WHICH STUDIED LEISURE-TIME ACTIVITY-INTERESTS OF HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS. (PART 1 IS ED 002 929.) THE MAIN INTEREST OF THE STUDY WAS TO PRODUCE SCIENTIFIC DATA AND PARTICULARLY SUCH DATA AS MAY BE OF SERVICE TO SCHOOLS, PLANNERS, THOSE INTERESTED IN LEISURE-TIME ACTIVITIES, AND SOCIAL WORKERS. THESE TABLES REPORT IN PERCENTAGE FORM INCIDENCES OF A FULL SPECTRUM OF RECREATIONAL ACTIVITIES GARNERED FROM A PRETEST OF 8,000 CASES STUDIED THROUGH THE USE OF MATRICES OF 40,000 TETRACHLORIC CORRELATIONS AND THE ANALYSIS OF WRITE-INS TO OPEN-ENDED QUESTIONS. EACH ACTIVITY USED WAS MENTIONED AT LEAST ONCE IN THESE PRETEST CASES. FOR THE FIRST 77 ACTIVITIES A REPORT WAS MADE OF THE PERCENTAGE ENGAGING IN THE ACTIVITY A SPECIFIED NUMBER OF TIMES. BELOW THIS WAS REPORTED THE PERCENT "WANTING TO" DO THE ACTIVITY "IF NOTHING PREVENTED YOU." THE THIRD LINE REPORTED A "LIKE-DO-RATIO" INTENDED TO MEASURE THE DEGREE OF APPETITION FOR AN ACTIVITY. RATIOS ABOVE 1.00 INDICATED AN APPETITION FOR AN ACTIVITY, RATIOS BELOW INDICATED A "DIS-APPETITION." THE SYMBOL "D" IN THE LIKE-DO RATIO ROW MEANS THAT THE PERCENT OF PERSONS DOING THE ACTIVITY AND THE PERCENT OF PERSONS WANTING TO DO THE ACTIVITY MORE OFTEN WERE BOTH ZERO. THE SYMBOL "A" IN THE LIKE-DO RATIO ROW SIGNIFIED APPETITION FOR AN ACTIVITY IN WHICH THE PERCENT OF PERSONS INDICATED THAT THE ACTIVITY WAS DONE IS ZERO. RATIOS ABOVE 1.00 SIGNIFIED APPETITE FOR AN ACTIVITY--"TO DO IT MORE OFTEN OR TO TRY IT OUT." (JL)

BASIC TABLES FOR THE STUDY OF LEISURE TIME ACTIVITY-INTEREST TYPES IN SEVENTY-THREE THOUSAND TEEN-AGE YOUTH IN THE WASHINGTON METROPOLITAN REGION AND IN FLINT, MICHIGAN

Tables Prepared by John Frank Schmidt
Sociology Department
University of Maryland

This is a study of the leisure time activity-interests of high school students in the Washington, D. C. Metropolitan Area which includes the public school systems of the District of Columbia, Prince Georges's and Montgomery counties in Maryland, and Fairfax, Falls Church, Arlington and Alexandria in Virginia and some private schools. The main interest of the study is to produce scientific data and particularly such data as may be of service to schools, planners, those interested in leisure time activities, and social workers. Working hypotheses are that such factors as age, sex, socio-economic status, and residential density are determinants of differences in recreational ("spare time") activities engaged in and preferred by high school youth. An empirical, but common-sense, classification of youth by their recreational activity interests has been made so that measurements of Outdoor, Intellectual, Passive, Altruistic and Dating youth may be ascertained.

The universe consists of all high school students in the metropolitan area who were able to take the test. All public high schools participated as well as some private schools. About 73352 junior and senior high school students answered the principle questionnaire booklet. In addition, all answered one of sixteen special booklets. A sample of Flint, Michigan high school students, grades 10-12, a sample of some Catholic high schools for girls, and one preparatory school were in addition collected. A ten percent sample of junior high schools in the area totaled about five thousand cases.

All data was visually edited as well as machine edited for faulty data.

The reporting of the incidence of particular recreational activity-interests in teen-age youth remains a historical document when the source of variation in incidence among significant classifications of youth are ignored. Generalizations concerning recreational interests in youth, per se, as an entity of research study can be quite misleading when basic differences among youth are not taken into account. Emphasis in this study is on the activity-interests of a typology of youth close to the folk-loristic stereotypes of what youth in Western civilization are reputed to be. Thus we have the following types:

Outdoor (abbreviated as OUT)
Intellectual (abbreviated as INT)
Passive (abbreviated as PAS)
Altruistic (abbreviated as ALT)
Dating (abbreviated as DAT)
Undetermined (abbreviated as UNT)

The classification of each boy and girl into adominant activity-interest type is done by placing the individual into that activity-interest type in which he or she has the highest percentage of the respective scores appropriate to their sex. Thus, if 20 out of 39 possible is chosen by a boy in the outdoor activities score, and he chooses 9 out of 24 possible passive activity-interests, and, in addition, 48 out of a possible 53 intellectual activities, the fraction 48/53 is his largest score (as a fraction). He consequently will be typed as a boy with intellectual activity interests. Should all of his scores--for outdoor, for intellectual, and for passive leisure time interests--be below the median of all boys he is classified as undetermined.

These tables report in percentage form incidences of a full spectrum of recreational activities garnered from a pretest of 8000 cases studied thru the use of matrices of 40,000 tetrachloric correlations and the analysis of write-ins to open ended questions. Each activity used was mentioned at least once in these pretest cases. For the first 77 activities a report is made of the percent engaging in the activity a specified number of times. Below this is reported the percent "wanting to" do the activity "if nothing prevented you". The third line reports a "like-do ratio" intended to measure the degree of appetition for an activity. Ratios above 1.00 indicate an appetition for an activity; ratios below indicate a "dis-appetition". The symbol "D" in the like-do ratio row means that the percent of persons doing the activity and the percent of persons wanting to do the activity more often were both zero. The symbol "A" in the like-do ratio row signifies appetition for an activity in which the percent of person indicating that the activity was done was zero. Ratios above 1.00 signify appetite for an activity--"to do it more often or to try it out".

The like-do ratio is computed as follows:

If F_j is a count of a particular activity participated in and F_i is a count of a particular activity desired, then $\sum_{j=1}^{77} F_j$ is equal to the sum of the activities participated in and $\sum_{i=1}^{77} F_i$ is equal to the summation of activities desired. The like-do ratio is equal to:

$$\frac{F_i}{\Sigma F_i} \div \frac{F_j}{\Sigma F_j}$$

These ratios are done for each grouping in the table. An example of a grouping is: Outdoor Boys Under 16 years of age, living in a high density area, in Washington, D. C., having low socio-economic status.

An important variable that is considered in this study is that of the density of population in small ecological units. The most common manner of measuring density is to divide the number of the total population of all ages within a unit such as a census tract or community area by the number of square miles or acres within the unit. In this study, available land such as open-country areas, parklands, and areas developed for specific recreational use is differentiated from unaccessible land such as governmental reservations, and installations not available to all the public. The unaccessible acreage was not included in the computation of density in this study.

A computation of population density was made for each of the three hundred and thirty-five census tracts in the Washington Standard Metropolitan Area. This was done by computing the total number of people of all ages per "available" acre of residential undeveloped open-country, undeveloped wooded areas, parkland and recreational space. This may be referred to as a living space density and is intended to reflect or indicate the number of people who have an acre of "green" space available to them for other than work-purposes, that is, recreational or leisure-time purposes.

For Virginia and Maryland, 1959 data was used; for the District of Columbia, 1957 data.

Participants in this leisure time study are viewed as residents of census tracts of either high (seventy or more persons per acre), middle (ten to 69.9 persons per acre), or low (less than ten persons per acre) "living space" density. Residents who live in a high density region are regarded as living in a region which is deficient in the amount of "green" space available to it. The population or "living space" figures by census tracts is given in Appendix B. in the previous volume.

It is assumed in this study that one of the values of city dwellers is to aspire to have as much living space (in particular, green parkland and wooded areas) as possible. This is an attainable goal for all.

High density regions (which presumably have a minimum of trees and grass within them) will be designated as being of Density Region I. Low density regions (which presumably have a maximum of trees and grass within them) will be designated as being of Density Region III.

Clusters of contiguous census tracts with similar green space densities are designated as Density-Areas. A number of Density-Areas make up a Density Region. (There are three Density Regions: I, II, III (not necessarily contiguous). However, there are 37 Density-Areas considered in this study--some small and some very large in population. Small suburbs of Washington are likely to be in Density Region II, while open country areas are likely to be in Density Region III.

Washington, D. C., has all three Density Regions; Montgomery County, Prince Georges County in Maryland, and Alexandria and Arlington and Fairfax Counties in Virginia are split into two parts, Density Region II or Density Region III. Falls Church is in Density Region II.

In summation, the following ecological space considerations are made:

A. Jurisdiction: Washington, D. C.
Jurisdiction: Maryland (a) Montgomery County
(b) Prince Georges County
Jurisdiction: Virginia (a) Alexandria
(b) Arlington and Falls Church
(c) Fairfax County
B. Density Region: I(High); II(Middle); III(Low)
C. Density-Area: Thirty-seven areas.

Work on differences in the 37 density-areas is not given in this volume.

Density Region I is abbreviated as High Density.
Density Region II is abbreviated as Medium Density.
Density Region III is abbreviated as Low Density.

Socioeconomic status: The cutting point for the socioeconomic status score is the median for the entire Washington Metropolitan Area 9-12th grades in public high schools.

Basic categories are further explained in the previous volume of this report: "Leisure Time Activity-Interests in Teen-Age Youth in the Washington Metropolitan Region."

Data for the 16 special booklets have varying sizes of samples. These sample sizes are given on pages 277-8

Distributions of scores for the various scales are given on pages 261-274 The class intervals for these distributions are on pages 275-6. This research included 240 IBM columns of information most of which is in binary form. The typing procedures for that data in the special booklets ignored the stricture that at least one of the Outdoor, Intellectual or Passive Activity-Interest scores in boys, for example, was above the median for the appropriate universe of cases.
